Ermita: Senate ZTE probe's failure to link GMA, vindication

By Michael Lina Ullar and Gil C. Cabasangan Jr.

THE FAILURE OF THE SENATE BLUE ribbon committee to find direct evidence linking President Macapagal-Arroyo to the controversial National Broadband Network (NBN) deal is a "vindication" for the Arroyo administration, Executive Secretary Salasorda Ermita said yesterday.

Ermita felt relieved that Sen. Alan Peter Cayetano admitted Tuesday that the Senate investigation of the scrapped $320-million NBN deal had yielded evidence "leading up to the Office of the President" but no direct testimony linking President Macapagal-Arroyo to the scandal-ridden project.

Sen. Ruffalo Lacson said he was baffled by Cayetano's statement that there was no evidence linking the NBN deal to Macabaling but no direct evidence that would directly link the President.

"The idea that the most responsible sitting in Malacanang," Lacson added, "Cayetano, chair of the blue ribbon committee, said there was evidence leading up to the Office of the President, 'that it is always better—may it be in a cover of law, in an impeachment proceeding or in the blue ribbon committee—that there is direct testimony.'"

"That's very significant because the fact of the matter is even if we listen to all interviews in the Senate, there

JUST LIKE OIL. Countries around the Mekong Delta—Thailand, Vietnam, Cambodia, Laos and Burma—are forming a rice-fixing cartel like the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (Opec). Thailand's prime minister announced on Wednesday. The grouping of the Mekong nations will be called the Organization of Rice Exporting Countries (Orec).

All about 'secret' revamp from GMA herself

By Michael Lina Ullar

MANILA, CAMBODIA—THE Revamp of the Cabinet may be a "secret," as President Macapagal-Arroyo announced with giggles on Monday, but she herself has been coyly disclosing bits and pieces of it.

In a late-night chat with reporters on that tropical island on Tuesday, the President dropped some coded clues without being prodded, saying, for example, that the position of Solicitor General Gilbert Tondora was not included in the revamp.

"Gilbert is not part of the secret," she quipped, eliciting chuckles from reporters, most of whom had traveled from Manila to join her three-day Pao Pao-on, roll-off vacation that began on Monday in Banteay, Sihanoukville, and ended yesterday in Gajayen de Oro City.

Ms. Arroyo said "civilian supremacy" should be observed in the military establishment, which was why she was keeping Tondora—a nephew of former Eduardo "Danding" Cojuangco, a top legislator and a former congressman of Tarlac—in her Cabinet.

The so-called new "singing troupe" in the Cabinet appear to be safe—for now.

When asked if Secretary Greg Rosendo of the Presidential Management Staff, Energy Secretary Angelo Reyes and Metropolitan Manila Development Authority Chair Bayani Fernando were part of the "secret," Ms. Arroyo said: "So far, no."

The trio, along with Tondora, were named their Commander in Chief with the classic Visayan lullaby "Mend Nila" and "Usakay" during a party the other night in Castigan

BANGKOK—THE COUNTRIES of Burma (Myanmar), Cambodia, Laos, Thailand and Vietnam have agreed in principle to form a rice price-fixing cartel similar to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (Opec) as costs of the staple grain rocket, Thailand's prime minister said on Wednesday.

Thailand's Prime Minister Thaksin Shinawatra said the grouping of Mekong nations would be called the Organization of Rice Exporting Countries (Orec).

"I have talked with Burma and invited them to join the rice exporting countries cartel, which will include Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia, to fix the price," Thaksin told reporters.

He said Burma's Prime Minister Gen. Thein Sein, in Thailand for an official visit, had agreed to join, even though the customary nation was not currently a large rice exporter.

"Thailand will help them in terms of technical support to improve their production for export," Thaksin said.

Senah said Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia had also agreed to join, and Thai Foreign Minister Supachai Panjavan said they should begin meeting soon.

Fallen colonel sought AFP reforms, say 'mistahs'

POND WORDS AND MEMORIES flowed at the eulogical services held on Tuesday night for the Army colonel found dead in his quarters on April 24 with a single gunshot wound in the forehead.

Family members and colleagues gathered at St. Michael's Chapel at the Army headquarters in Fort Benigno described Roberto Caldes as a warrior and a leader, an idealist and a dependable friend, and a loving and gentleman brother and uncle.

But Caldes's friends from the Philippine Military Academy Class of 2003 also recalled his frustrations in the Armed Forces, and how, even shortly before his death, he had considered leaving the service to which he had dedicated his life.

In a eulogy, Senior Sgt. Allen Bualto recalled how in 2001, Caldes spoke of his complaints about his senior officers in the military.

Was the Battle of Manila Bay on film?

By Nick Deocampo

(The author is a filmmaker and author of a forthcoming book, Manila's Colonial Empire: US Colonization and the Emergence of Cinema in the Philippines.)

ONE HUNDRED TEN YEARS AGO TODAY, "a splendid little war" raged out here as a people with two of the world's powerful navies.

The war in 1898 that broke out between Spain, the oldest maritime power, and the United States, the new kid on the block, brought the mighty US naval fleet to the Philippines.

The United States intended to free the Philippines from Spanish tyranny, as in Cuba, but later decided to keep it as a colony. On that fateful first of May, the course of world history changed. The triumph of the American naval fleet over the Spanish armada signaled the United States' ascent as a new world power.

THE BATTLE OF MANILA BAY has been one of the celebrated themes in early US cinema.

Pimentel warns Palace against takeover of Meralco

SEN. AQUILINO PIMENTEL, JR. YEL today told Malacañang to keep its hands off Manila Electric Co. until reports that the state-owned power firm, Government Service Insurance System (GSIS), had engaged the Legaspi family in a proxy fight.

"I don't favor the takeover of private monopolies by government. I would like that they [should be] forced to compulsorily seek the participation of the law. Any government takeover is bad, government is not good at running any business," said Pimentel in an interview with reporters.

Pimentel said that if the government was concerned about the high rates being charged by Manila in power, renewable and non-renewable sources in Metro Manila, "it could influence power prices by ratifying the law."

"The government has enough power to win in Manila, it can do this with the EDSA Electric Power Industry Reform Act of 2001 which is being strengthened further by the law," said Pimentel.

The government, through the GSIS, owned a 30% of Meralco which is non-equivalent to the stake held by the Legaspi group has management control of the utility GSIS share Pimentel Gacera wants a management takeover to promote cost transparency in electricity operations and increasing the public shareholders, which holds roughly 30 percent of Meralco, the rates to get majority of the 11 members board in the May 27 elections.

Pimentel said that there was no more, more than the GSIS would do a better job in running Meralco than the Legaspi group.

IS deserves to be included in programs meant to help masses

THE WORKING WOMEN'S UNION (WWU) need all the support it is able to cope with the rising prices of basic commodities, especially food. The ongoing food crisis has brought this union into focus.

In response, the government talks about giving workers wage hikes, but these are not what laborers need. These are not enough but will take care of the needs of the 25 million workers in the jobs and sector (JOS) back to work are not sufficient to them. They are not covered by most labor laws, including the minimum wage law. And the majority is much poorer than wage earners.

It includes include vendors, small farmers, fishers, etc. Some bread makers, etc. Others, construction workers, and government employees. The sector is the catch basin of those displaced from formal work or have no other choice but to create their own livelihood. These workers need the support now.

It workers constitute almost half of the economy's GDP, they:

- are barely covered by social security and health services;
- do not vote regularly;
- are often exploited by employers;
- either working conditions are subject to labor standards;
- are often exploited/organized and/or health benefits;

- have minimal access to production resources; and
- during this critical time, are not even considered to participate in social help programs.

It is as if they do not exist.

In public government initiatives of efforts to help the poor, the needs of the 25 million IS workers cannot be ignored.

House Bill 1755, or the bill titled "An Act Providing for a Budget Cuts for Workers in the National Economy," supporting the House of Representatives' Committee on Labor. This bill is intended to provide for IS workers by:

- making their rights through a simple modular registration system and inclusion of information on their government database;
- making available a comprehensive package of programs including PhilHealth, SSS and COOP coverage (for government employees); re-examination skills enhancement programs, credit facilities, and organic support;
- developing standards in areas of wages, conditions of work and benefits;
- improving their participation in government bodies; and
- ensuring government offices are developing and implementing programs for them.

The passage of HB 1755 into law is, therefore, a relief.

It will be:

- President Macapagal-Arroyo to certify HB 1755 as urgent; Congress must act on the bill;
- the House Labor Committee to start deliberations on it;
- a concerted motion to file a similar bill in Senate; and
- our legislators to immediately prioritize the bill.

Protecting the welfare of all workers is a government responsibility for ensuring their capability to cope during this critical time. Congress and the Executive have the power to do both these tasks.

Aussein's suggestions doable, show heart for Pinoy

AS SOME OF THE SUGGESTIONS GIVEN BY RENE RAMOS, an Australian resident in a Philippine (Inquirer, 12/23/07), this issue I would say, is more of a Filipino than the ill-fated Filipino who are subject to the plight of our hapless countrymen suffering from the greed of the leaders. His suggestions include the present rice price, though simple, seems doable and practical, but they're often only others are passed on by the government. I hope the government will consider Ramos's suggestions instead of using the rice crisis as a platform for political grandstanding.

—JESSE RAMOS
Jesús Ramos, Jr.
Jesús Ramos, Jr.

Rice crisis media's fault

COME TO THINK OF IT, THE CURRENT RICE crisis that we have could be partly blamed on media. Why? For the past two weeks or so, the news channels broadcasted reports of shortages and on radio/TV newscasts, and the word regularly by both print and broadcast commentators, etc. Thus, the people got scared and started panicking for the rice crisis. It is true, I remember some years ago at the height of the OJ trial (played only on radio), I was a doctor saying this on the radio: "I'm a doctor. I am not a prophet. The big fat doctor told us that the beginning of the trial was not the end. What media should concentrate on is information which causes discomfort of the people."

—JESSE RAMOS, JR.
Jesús Ramos, Jr.

Rice crisis just meant to be political diversion

THE "RICE CRISIS" THAT'S STIRRING IS IN the last light now it is not just as big as the government would want us to believe. The administration simply using it to divert public focus from the real issues, the beginning of President Macapagal-Arroyo's term in Malacañan and the massive corruption in high government offices.

The media is involved in it. It is a complex of power, the state, the media, the business, the government, the people, the producers, but the whole operation is not well. Thanks to the distorted agricultural policies of the administration as well as the massive corruption in government that has degraded the agricultural sector of much-needed support, but in addition the many times farmers were used to be in a state of distress for years. In fact, the rice farmers, irrigation and some banks to allow some agricultural projects, with some being left abandoned.

Nonetheless, there is from President Macapagal-Arroyo and her agricultural officials to address the rice crisis. The rice crisis is not an immediately solved. The Philippines should use away from its dependence on imports for food. All our support and help should be extended to farmers. A government program should be passed and the large-scale extension of credit funds into agricultural areas should be stopped. Unless these are done and government corruption goes on, the country "rice crisis" will remain and a bad one to not be solved.

Army air strikes defeat peace zone agreement signed in Jolo

Gov't tagged responsible for pullout of Malaysians

ZONE OF PEACE

ZAMBIANGA CITY—GOVERNMENT FORCES launched air strikes on suspected terrorist bases near Jolo, breaking a brief episode of silence that came with the signing by military, Church and civilian leaders of a pact declaring the capital a zone of peace about a week ago.

Mr. Eugene Bano, spokesperson of the Western Mindanao Command, said the air strikes in Zamboanga, Jolo, were part of Task Force Group's operations against Abu Sayyaf Group (ASG) members who were seen with the much Malabon CDO (command) in the area.

The task force was forced to pursue operations.

CORBALE CITY—DELEGATES of the 10,000-strong Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) have stated the government for the planned pullout of Malaysian peacekeepers from the Islamic Mindanao Peacekeeping Force (MILF).

"We are in Jolo, but the Philippine government," MILF spokesman Ibrahim Masud said in a statement posted on the group's website.

"The slow pace of the peace process apparently triggered the upcoming withdrawal of Malaysian peacekeepers."

Masud said the government failed to honor its commitments under previous agreements that it entered into with the MILF such as a draft plan on security matters.

Vice gov asks SC to bar poll exec from Ermita son case

MANILA CITY—LAWYERS for Vice Gov Mark Linares have filed a petition asking the Supreme Court to issue a temporary restraining order (TRO) to disqualify Executive Commission Member Marcialino Linares from participating in the hearing of the electoral protest filed by rival Edwin Ermita, son of Executive Secretary Eduardo Ermita.

In an April 22 petition, a copy of which was filed with the Commission on Elections, the Linares camp claimed that Marcialino's involvement as commission member had not been confirmed by the Commission on Appointments.

"It is the official concern of the public that will involve Marcialino's involvement and allow the electoral protest hearing to be conducted," the Linares camp said.

Ermita's lawyer, Peter Underwood, said in a phone interview.

Underwood said the Linares camp was hoping that, if the Supreme Court barred Linares from the hearing, it would also bar the son of the executive secretary.

Color-blind lensman shares wonders of the wild

A MALAYAN jungle dweller, a Philippine endemic bird species, in photos taken in Tawue, Quezon.

By Marivic Cane
Sun, Public City

LOOKING BEYOND WHAT HIS EYES CAN see was one thing photographer Romo Oron experienced during the South Day celebration in Tawue, Quezon, on April 22. April 18 was his challenge of shooting wild birds with his camera, in a place struggling with color blindness.

Oron, 43, was born with the disability. He usually has to be used to wear colored socks to school, thinking that they were white. "My teachers thought I was simply making fun of me following their instructions," he said.

Although he was recognized as a student of color, he has difficulty distinguishing shades, as in his three children. "It became a problem when I started in photography," he said.

The condition became even more of a disadvantage for the photographer of birds since the feathered creatures are usually identified by their plumage.

To ensure that his shots are accurate, Oron uses the digital camera, a feature that adjusts primary colors in an image to produce the correct natural colors. "If you are able to get your white correctly during image processing, all the other colors will follow," he added.

Oron's 13-year-old son Romo, who is starting to go into "birding" in bird photography as well, plays a big role in his profession. Oron would ask the boy to look at the raw photographs and compare them with images he has taken.

"It is very good with colors," Oron said. "I call him my color consultant." Oron said. From there, father and son would enhance the colors accordingly while processing the images.

Caught on cam

Just like any other bird lover, Romo used to shoot birds with a video rifle. But his passion for photography led him to realize the challenge of shooting birds with perfect timing and appropriate angle and light—without harming the subject.

"Bird photography can be done through various media such that people will know what they will experience the situation of the birds' habitat," he said.

In 2005, Oron decided to enter the family's business in construction to start his own bird photography business. The first major exhibit was the South Day celebration of local and national artists at Kaula Salal museum in San Felipe City recently.

Oron's photographs have been displayed online at different Philippine bird forums and at his own blog site. His search for wild birds has brought him to explore in nature.

A FLOCK of Common Redheads (Fregata minor) and Common Greenlets (Fregata aenea) in a shallow body of water in South Agutayao, San Felipe City.

in Olongapo, the Cavendish, Banaue, General Luna, and San Felipe.

Director of a nature-based education (Shikharu) in February 2006 made it in the handbook of the birds of the world, an online tool made available as an online product in Spain. That at the public exhibition in Tawue, it was shown one of the new ones, the bird was "captured" by the bird in its natural habitat.

Tip of the iceberg

Of the 44 bird species in the Philippines, 25 are endemic, Oron said. He has been able to photograph 222 of the species, but he said he was only "barely able to scratch the surface."

He classified the birds as endemic or those staying in the breeding season, migratory or those seasonally moving to other locations for favorable conditions, and endemic or those nesting in the forest, which he is most interested in.

Agree from their plumage, Oron is able to appreciate how birds survive naturally in the Philippines from the time they are laid until they mature. Bird photography makes him realize how privileged he is as a bird lover.

"The more an individual of the species, the more quality. They look for new things—food and safety," he said. The presence of birds indicates habitat, forest and water systems, he added.

As a parent, Oron's experience of the Philippines bird species is definitely renewed. Daily around 500 pairs of the Philippine monkey-eating eagle are left, as of Oron's last count.

He remembered his son asking him why birds are so rare. The words are so rare that he wanted to go to that level when people would stop harming the environment, an issue that was illegal but because they would be informed birds.

"If people will not stop when they hear, they might start taking action," Oron said. He hopes to raise the people's awareness on the need to protect the birds' habitats in such a way that they can survive.

LEADERSHIP JUST STRUCK MAXIMUM FOR THIS

Wilkes more back-to-back games has put the record tied to Francis Maras last night, claiming another powerhouse victory in the Philippine Basketball Association (PBA) in the elimination of the Smart 88ers in the first round of the 2011 season.

Maras, who scored 32 points, had eight rebounds and two steals, and his effort helped the Dragons lead 88-75 at the end of the first half.

But Barako, who entered the game leading into the final five minutes, pulled out an 88-75 game of the season with a 5-1 lead.

Carlo Aguirre scored 23 points, including the game-winning layup off a Coach Ocho double move for 76-75, giving him the final 23 seconds which put a stop to a two-point shot by the Tigers and left them at 7-0.

While Wilkes has led more than in close of season against the Dragons, coach Carlo Maras said that he is aware of what happened to the team after a 90-82 overtime win over the Barangay Ginebra last time (26-15) game being won.

"It is a fact that didn't escape the Dragons' eyes," he said.

"So, it means about that, my teammates have told me," Maras said. "We really need to be confident in ourselves and we know that we can get it."

Maras's defense was not enough, but the Dragons powered for three straight wins and topped Maras's three-game winning streak for a 2-2 record.

Second import Gary Basco scored 23 points and led seven games for Wilkes. Danny Seigler, emerging from an operation that required a legging foot surgery, was widely expected by the Dragons.

Suspects nabbed with photocopying machine, bogus BIR and postal ID cards

By Marko Romo

AUTHORITIES YESTERDAY ARRESTED nine suspected members of a syndicate involved in making fake identification cards and documents used to make Social Security System (SSS) claims.

A joint team of operatives from the Metropolitan Manila Development Authority and the Quezon City Police District arrested the nine in front of the SSS Building in East Avenue, Barangay Payson.

They were identified as Marilou Valdez, 42; Norma-Ida Cruz, 40; Roselle Rose, 40; Joyce Mapa, 30; Ericson Manzano, 28; Eddie dela Cruz, 40; Irene Banguing, 44; Princess Montalban, 21 and Corrie Garganera, 32.

Sgt. Ryo Posing, chief of the SMDA intelligence and investigation unit, said the group's fake IDs and other documents were used by unemployed individuals to file claims for death benefits, loans and even monthly pensions of legitimate SSS members. The suspects also allegedly reused outdated documents, although none of them is a lawyer.

Posing said the operation was prompted by a complaint from SSS officials and after one of their co-defendants agreed to buy a fake ID from the group.

"Some suspects inside the SSS office acted as business while other members of the syndicate reproduce IDs and documents," he said.

the business.

Seized from the suspects were several fake postal IDs and Bureau of Internal Revenue cards, a photocopying machine, dry seal stamps and rubber stamps bearing the names of lawyers.

Posing said the suspects will be charged with falsification of public documents. The nine, however, denied the accusations.

Montalban said she only accepted typing jobs. "I didn't know that accepting typing jobs was illegal," she said. "I'm not a member of any syndicate."

Police file complaint vs Baron Geisler

By Lela B. Salaveria

THE PHILIPPINE NATIONAL POLICE yesterday filed a complaint for acts of harassment in the Department of Justice against actor Baron Geisler.

Barbie, the 21-year-old daughter of show business couple William Martinez and Nene Aguilera, Maricela Barro, accused Geisler of touching her breasts and asking her to have sex with him.

In her recent police statement which was attached to the complaint filed in the DOJ, Barbie said the incident took place inside a bar in Makati City on April 26.

In an earlier interview on television, the young girl said she was with her friends inside the nightclub when she decided to send a text message to Geisler, asking him to join her at the bar.

Barbie said in her statement that she was helping Geisler order his change when he placed his arm around her and she hugged him.

Uncomfortable

She added that she was uncomfortable with this as she tried to move away, but he refused to leave his hold on her.

The actor then asked her if she had a boyfriend, Barbie told the police. When she told him that she had one, he started at her and asked her to have sex with him.

She said that she was taken by surprise by Geisler's actions because he had looked up to him as an older brother.

Geisler and again said to be "harmless" in the reality show, "Bully Big Brother" which aired on ABS-CBN. At this point, Barbie said that Geisler, when, by then, knows that he had offended her, apologized and asked her for a hug.

He then embraced her even though she said she had placed her hand against his chest to prevent him from moving too close to her.

Moving away

She said she was moving away from Geisler when he cupped her face with his hands and then touched her breast.

After the incident, Barbie said she reported to her friends that she wanted to leave the bar. Geisler, however, saw the police and asked her not to say anything with him.

"Do not be stopped," she quoted him as saying. At this point, she said she got mad and started at the actor. Geisler left shortly after.

Barbie added that she reported the incident to Geisler's brother, Donald, who assured her that he would try to talk to his brother.

Geisler, in an interview over radio station DMMR, had denied the girl's accusations, although he said that he was willing to talk to her parents to clear his name.

Invest more in agriculture, UN FAO urges nations

By Amy R. Simon Rising food prices can be seen as opportunity to reverse trend

THE UNITED NATIONS FOOD AND AGRICULTURE ORGANIZATION has urged the international community to seize the chance to boost agriculture, adding that high food prices, while they pose a threat, can also be an opportunity.

According to FAO, high food commodity prices call for a "win-win approach" through policies and programs to assist the millions of poor and help farmers in the developing world take advantage of the new situation.

"We must produce more food where it is urgently needed to control the impact of rising prices in poor countries, and simultaneously boost productivity and expand production to create more income and employment opportunities for the farmers," food said.

He added that there was a need to ensure small farmers access to land and water resources and essential inputs such as seeds and fertilizers.

"That will enable them to increase their supply response to higher prices, invest their income, improve their livelihoods and ultimately benefit consumers as well," food explained.

Food warned that while high food prices encourage food security and create social income, there was a danger of this emergency overshadowing long-term economic development.

"To ensure that small farmers and rural households benefit from higher food prices, we need to create a favorable policy environment that reduces the constraints facing their sector, farmers and traders," he said.

Food explained that this simple measure governments should invest more in the agriculture sector as "many of the declines in the level of public investment spent on agriculture and rural development."

Generally, farmers in the developing world have to bear the economic burden of food insecurity such as malnutrition and malnutrition, access to technology and innovation is slow and still increasing malnutrition and credit systems.

Food said that a lack of infrastructure, facilities and transport, farmers also have to bear the burden of the rising prices.

Food recalled that when food prices soared in the '70s, many poor governments chose to lower its irrigation and agricultural research, thus under the impact for rapid production growth that saved millions from poverty and hunger.

A similar response to urgent demand today he added.

S&P says Asia to grow despite US recession

SINGAPORE—RISER ECONOMY WILL BE resilient in the face of a US recession thanks to the regional economies of China and India, but the pace of currency appreciation will slow, Standard & Poor's said yesterday.

S&P's report would take a hit at the world's largest currency value as a recession, reducing the amount of dollars flowing there, which would force them to raise interest rates, said S&P's analyst, Richard J. Davis, who said that S&P's Asia-Pacific economy will grow 6 percent on average in 2008 and 2009, he said.

S&P forecast the US economy would shrink 0.2 percent in the first quarter and 0.8 percent in the second. The United States is due to report first quarter GDP figures later on Wednesday.

"While we are expecting to see that the Asian region has developed nations that very strong drivers for growth, which would offset the influence of the weakening US economy," S&P's report says.

China and India demand for goods from the rest of the world after some of the impact from weaker US demand.

Asian regional trade would also be boosted by a series of free trade pacts that have been signed, S&P said.

It forecast China's economy will likely to rise between 8.5 percent and 10 percent in 2008, supported by solid consumption and investment, before slowing to a range of 7.5 percent to 8.5 percent in 2009. China's economy grew 11.9 percent in 2007.

The forecast India's economy will grow between 8.5 percent and 9.5 percent in 2008, and 7.5 percent in 2009. India's economy grew 9.4 percent in 2007.

But inflation data pose a threat to the region, with some Asian central banks facing limited money policy to prevent inflation. Growth at the time of slowing exports, he said.

Asian stocks Asian Fed move

HONG KONG—INVESTORS BRACED FOR a US interest rate decision on Wednesday were unsettled when the top Fed chief said the Fed would not raise rates, but the Fed's move to cut rates was not expected to be as large as the market had expected.

That could trouble Asian investors as even a slight loosening that it could also drive a wedge into the financial crisis, since the Fed's move to cut rates was not expected to be as large as the market had expected.

Financial markets were also reacting to US dollar-denominated product (USD) data late in the day. According to a Reuters poll, the report is expected to show the US economy grew 0.2 percent in the first quarter, growing at its slowest pace in five years, as consumers cut spending and jobs disappeared.

The Fed is expected to raise rates by a quarter percentage point to 2 percent, which would take the rate to 2.25 percent, but the Fed's move to cut rates was not expected to be as large as the market had expected.

Two roasted goat recipes

KITCHEN RESCUE

Rogelio Aphana

AFTER THE COLUMN I DID on whole spit-roasted goat, readers' recipe requests came in. Among the letter readers, Fidel and Sandee Sorogol were the biggest goat meat lovers.

Since I've never had spit-roasted goat in my life, I asked two of my colleagues to whip up recipes for the column. One of them is George Lizares, the most credible Filipino chef in Middle Eastern, North African, Egyptian and Moroccan cuisines. Lizares worked in the Royal Palace in Damascus (1970s).

Roasted goat is an staple in the Levant as well. To I also asked Oriental Flavors and Holdings Inc. Galena Executive Chef Cyrille Soriano to share his Home Good Roasted Goat Pot Roast recipe with us.

Lizares' Spit-Roasted Cabrito (Kid Goat)

"There are many ways to spit-roast goat for entertaining. One trick is not to make it overdone, considering the long cooking time, your pit-cooked goat will look browned while the first house guests will be eating. You should be cooking it like we do in the Levant: the traditional method, in the traditional spit-roast, but the modern way is cooked whole the Roast is placed on the side of the spit. If you don't have a spit, you can use a meat roaster.

"This usually is best for lamb but you can use goat as well. Goat is a bit more delicate to eat, they should be well seasoned all around. If fully seasoned, keep it refrigerated for at least a day to improve the meat quality."

Marinate whole goat of about 5 kg in 1/2 cup olive oil, 1/2 cup lemon juice, 1/2 cup salt, 1/2 cup black pepper, 1/2 cup red wine, 1/2 cup vinegar, 1/2 cup onion powder, 1/2 cup garlic.

Marinate whole goat in marinade for 24 hours or overnight. Marinate in refrigerator for 24 hours.

Season with salt and pepper to taste and cook the goat in the oven. The goat is cooked when the meat is tender and the skin is browned. The goat is cooked when the meat is tender and the skin is browned. The goat is cooked when the meat is tender and the skin is browned.

'Tingi' may not be the best way to buy your medicine

ROSEAN APOLINARIO, WHO SAYS SHE is a late student at the Ateneo de Manila University, has experienced consumers "negotiating" expiry dates of over-the-counter drugs.

Apolinario said she recently went in search of a headache remedy and found several suitable products in her basket. The problem, however, was "I had no idea whether or not those medicines were still good." The expiry date was not written on any of the boxes.

Apolinario's next point is very valid given the Filipino consumer's buying habits.

There is the Philippines, many of these types of pills can be easily purchased by people from over-the-counter and even anti-venom stores. However, consumers have no way of double-checking the expiry date because most of these drugs that come in boxes only have the expiry information embossed on the side of the [boxed] packaging. Therefore, no consumer would not really know whether the medicine she purchased has expired or not."

I have mentioned this problem months ago. As to most developing countries, anti-venom Filipinos find it more practical to buy strong. Their budget would only go so far, so they will not buy many things until it was less they need them. And they really buy things in bulk.

That is why many people stand in line every day to buy rice. They have only enough for what they need that day, so that one more, so the neighborhood anti-venom store is a necessity.

In many households, people do not buy cooking oil and vinegar and garlic and salt and many other things in bottles or jars, but in baskets. When they need these cooking essentials, they would send a child, or they themselves would go, to the nearest anti-venom store and buy a cup of vinegar or cooking oil or a head of garlic.

And when they have a headache or a toothache or muscle pain, the anti-venom store doubles as a mini drugstore where they can get whatever medicine they want to take for their various aches and pains.

Most over-the-counter drugs are occasional purchases, the anti-venom store will not keep them in bulk and may just buy a few pieces, considering the purchasing habits of the neighborhood.

Given the way these drugs are currently packaged, the anti-venom store owner himself himself will have no idea if the medicines are past their expiration dates.

Like me, Apolinario wears expiration information written on the package of every tablet or capsule so that, whether consumers get their medicines from a drug store or a anti-venom store, they will not risk buying expired medicine just because they can only afford to buy cheap.
